Track Package

A easy to use, multi-carrier tracking tool with a modern interface

PACKAGE TRACKER

Package Tracker is a proof of concept built to simplify the experience of tracking shipments across multiple carriers. Inspired by the chaotic deliveries at my dad's auto shop, I wanted to create a tool that blends utility with polish—offering users a way to keep tabs on their deliveries without bouncing between clunky carrier sites and online merchants.

This project was a good excersize in design, front-end development, and user-centered thinking. I learned how small touches make a big difference. I'd love to expand this further—tie in live APIs, user accounts, and push notifications—but even in its current state, it's a good proof of concept in problem solving design.
